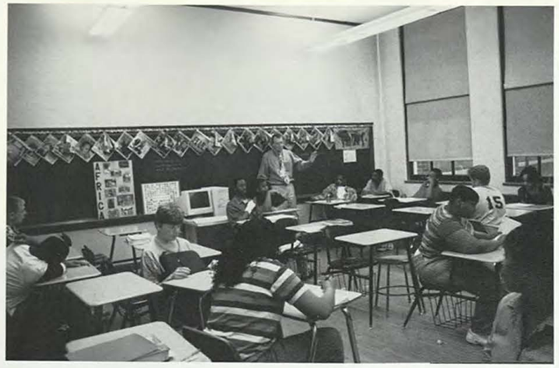
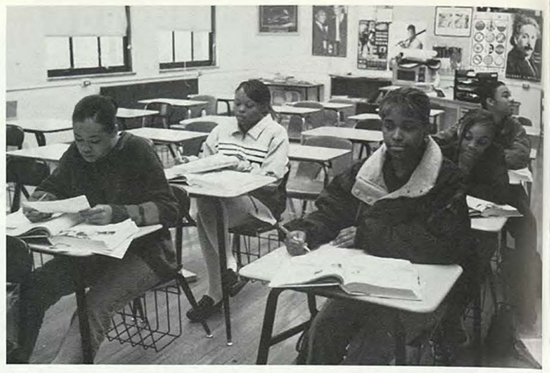
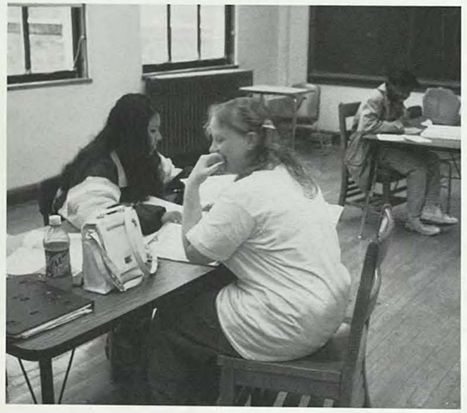
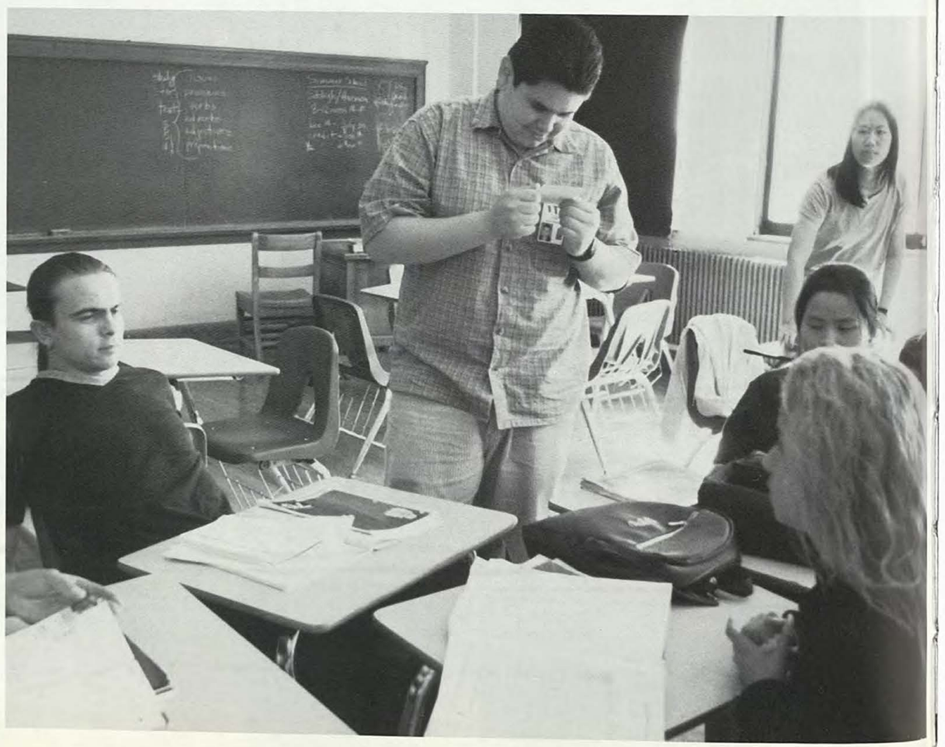
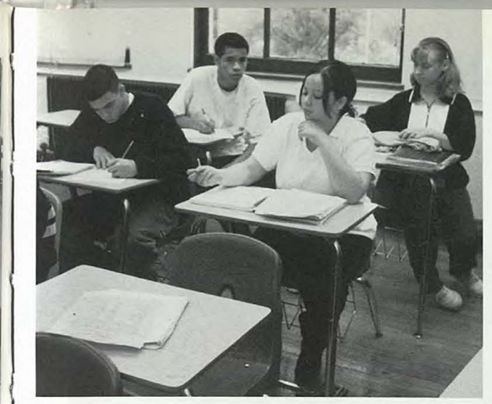
A Community On The Edge Of The Millennium











A Community That Starts With the Classroom . . .

KCK's innovative school program adds flexibility

By RAY BAILEY
for the Kansan

Shortly, the 1998-99 calendar year for the Kansas City, Kan., public school system will come to a close. For most students, teachers and some administrators the arrival of May 30 will mean taking tests, averaging grades, putting school books in summer storage and three months of vacation. But for Wyandotte High School and the elementary and middle schools that feed into it, May 30 will become a milestone. It will mark the first complete year of the First Things First Initiative.

It's been a dramatic year indeed.

Patricia Kamper, art teacher at Wyandotte, was hesitant when she heard plans to reform the entire district. After her first year however, she feels FTF is the best approach to district reform.

"Downtown administration told us to come up with a plan that was best for our students," said Kamper. "We took the bull by the horns and came up with a four-by-four block system."

"Students take four classes, or blocks, per semester and each class is 80 minutes long," she said. "You can develop relationships when you meet with your students for 80 minutes everyday."

"We gave our students a chance to vote on 'learning communities.' Each student was given a survey to fill out and we went with the top seven. To get students to buy in," she said, "you let them choose."

Wyandotte has been divided into seven learning communities:

- Business academy.
- Health careers/Life sciences.
- Hospitality.
- Humanities.
- Performing arts.
- Visual arts.
- Vocational technology.

Each community was set up around a common theme, and members focus all teaching and learning around that theme. Community size is limited to 200. "The students are in the program for four years," said Kamper. They can change if they want to, but we take a good look at their records to see if change is possible. This program is paying off," she said. "Students want to be here."

CARROLL MACKE, USD 500 public information director:

"Many of our students are successful and a lot of learning is going on in our schools. But many of our students are not as successful as we would like them to be, and we think FTF is the way to solve the problem."

Social studies teacher and soccer coach Jason Pendleton agrees with Kamper when it comes to FTF. "I'm completely for it. I wouldn't be in the building without FTF," said Pendleton. We're making an effort to educate our students instead of just surviving. We have a mixture of students and they have the ability to succeed. But some of their skills need to be refined."

The learning communities approach has enabled students to focus more of their time and effort on areas of interest. As more time is spent within the community, students develop the ability to plan more effectively for the future.

"The key to success is the high expectations we demand of our students," Pendleton said. I'm excited about the program and it will be interesting to see how well out students are doing in four years."

The FTF initiative, according to Carroll Macke, director of public information, is a district-wide attempt at school reform. J.C. Harmon, F.L. Schlagle and Washington are in various stages of development.

"Many of our students are successful and a lot of learning is going on in our schools," said Macke. "But many of our students are not as successful as we would like them to be, and we think FTF is the way to solve the problem."

"We want to improve our educational programs and turn our students into life-long learners," he said.

Other district administrators have voiced their concerns over

Volunteer efforts help shape teens

By DONALD BRADLEY
The Kansas City Star

What if someone had persuaded Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold to volunteer for Habitat for Humanity?

The two teens who went on a shooting rampage Tuesday in their Colorado high school reportedly were isolated and uninvolved in school and community.

"These two might have learned that by helping others, you help yourself," said Lashad Buffett, a Wyandotte High School senior. "They might have felt more a part of their community if they had been doing something to improve it.

"Doing what we do makes us feel wanted and needed."
Lashad Buffett, Wyandotte High School senior

Creative Thinkers

• What points that deal with the "real world" is this community trying to teach the students?

"We are trying to teach the students respect and tolerance for each other, team work, commitment and a sense in pride in what they do and who they are. We are also developing a program that will allow students to explore the various medias and technologies in the Visual Arts Community."

• What types of goals is this community being successful at accomplishing?

"Attendance is good, students are being more respectful and interested in each other, and we are seeing really good creativity coming out of the students."

• What are two likes and two dislikes about this community in general?

"I love developing relationships with the students over the courses of their careers at Wyandotte. Our teachers are really pushing themselves into new directions regarding instructions in the classroom. I don't have any dislikes."

An Industrious Group

The Vocational Technology community is designed for students that are interested in pursuing a career in the field of building trades.

Here are some survey questions answered by the coordinator of Vocational Technology, Mr. Mark Russell.

- Do you work on any major projects as a community?

"We try to get everyone over sixteen to work on the Habitat houses."

Vocational Technology seems to be a community working with hands-on technology. Do the students work with hands-on projects in this community?

"We offer wood and metal classes. We are currently finding more projects in math, etc. for the students to work with also."

What is a main option this community is trying to install in their students?

"We are trying to let them know that there are a lot of jobs availible in the occupational field. People will not hire you unless you have good attendance, skills, and an exceptional attitude."

Future Entrepreneurs

• Does this community offer any internships of any kind?

"None of the seniors signed up for any internships . There are 37 seniors and only 1 was interested."

• Are there any certain businesses that come and speak with students about entrepreneurialship skills?

"Marketing students are taking inventory . Business Academy contains 8 teachers and their jobs are to teach their students."

• What is the most common business students prefer to go into?

"Most students prefer to go into marketing, working with spreadsheets that have to do with business. They have students fill out applications for where they would like to work."

• What are the advantages for the seniors?

"They get to have the experience of having a job in the business world and 80% of them get to leave school at 11:30 everyday.

Getting Healthy

• What is the purpose of your community?

"We are focused on structuring our community so that our students, upon graduation, will be prepared to pursue a career in the health or life science fields."

• Could you explain one of your community's goals?

"We are committed to our upperclassmen becoming involved in internships that relate to their chosen pathway. We feel it is a very important addition to their education at Wyandotte. The internships allow our students a first hand look into their future careers."

• Will your students be involved with a job shadowing program?

"Yes, we are presently working with the Health Professional Pipeline Initiative where our freshmen and sophomores will have an opportunity to meet with a mentor once a week and participate in one field trip a month for job shadowing purposes."

• Can you give us an example of new course offerings?

"We offer a health careers exlporation course which allows our students the opportunity to explore the career pathways."

Welcome To Hospitality

What are some jobs that must be done as a community coordinator?

Well, I have about 88 responsibilities but I'm a cross between a co-administrator and the person who holds things all together in the community.

Does the community offer any internships, school/ class field-trips relating to the community?

Yes, we offer all of thoseto our students. to help them make a choice of what they want to do in the hospitality field, if they have'nt decided yet.

What is your communities main goal for the students in your community.

Our main goal is to prepare our students to go out into the world and become successful.

Over Achievers

• What are some activities that the Humanities community does?

"The humanities community does internships all year round and a number of the senior classes will be exclusively at Kansas City Kansas Community College."

What is Humanities?

"Humanities is basically a preparation for students to become college material."

• As Coordinator, do you have particular goals for this community? If so, what are they?

"Yes. Preparing students for college and master history along with any other requirements needed to be ready as freshmen in college."

• What are two advantages for you as a coordinator instead of a teacher?

"Some likes are focusing on academics and making sure students are first at getting an opportunity. Some dislikes are students that I had good relationships with in past classaes do not get to see me or talk to me anymore. I also do not like the point of being a counselor-like mentor instead of a teacher-friend mentor."

Life In The Fast Lane

• What is the purpose of the Opportunity Center?

"To allow students who lack credits the opportunity to earn those credits and become assigned to their proper grade."

• What are some goals the opportunity center offers for the students involved?

"The opportunity center is foucusing on raising reading levels, critical thinking skills, and problem-solving skills."

• Do you think the student's overall viewof this community is good based on thier attitudes, participation and willingness to learn? Why or why not?

"Yes. More students are focusing on doing their work and they are realizing that the opportunity is there to reach their proper grade level."

Mr. Clark

• What are some focusing points of this particular community?

"The focus is to get students into other communities that offer career options."

Up On The Stage

• What are some activities that the students are involved in?

"The students are involved in music, dance, theater and etc."

• Are there any shadowing jobs or off campus field trips for students to work during the school year?

"There are tuns! The students are involved in opera's, theaters, and dances."

• Does this community work in the public?

"Yes. We work on projects throughout the year. One of our projects will be working with Crossline Towers. Students visit elderly African American people and learn all about their history and culture. The students then as their project come back to school and either write it out as a play or reenact it in a play."

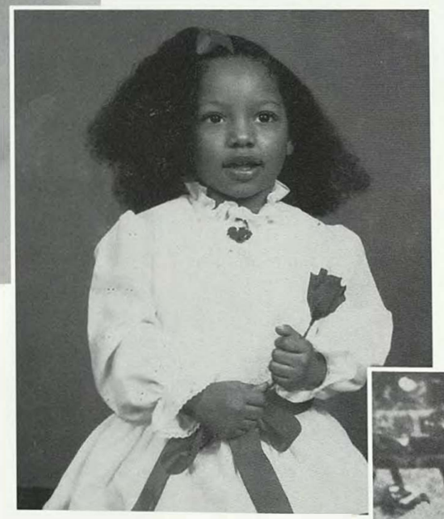
GRADUATION

Taneya Caples:
"Nee-Nee"

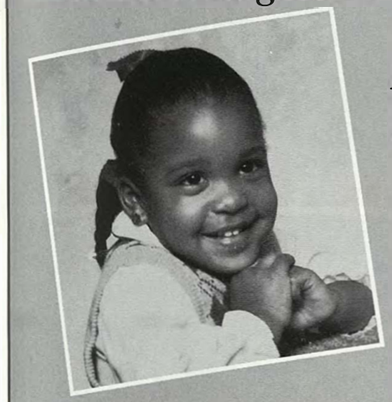
When you were born you were a beautiful baby doll! Now you are all grown-up and even more beautiful. I cannot believe it's time for you to graduate and find your place in the world.



I am proud of you and your accomplishments.
You are a role model for your little sister and other young ladies.
I love you very much,
your family loves you very much.
May God bless and watch over you in all your endeavors.

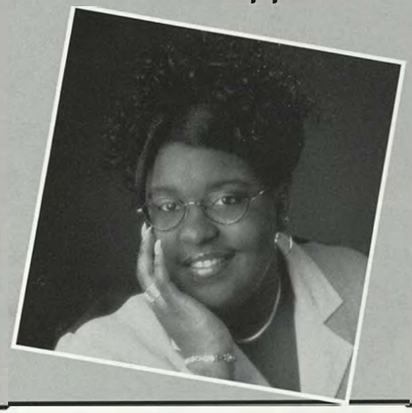
I Love You!
Mamma
Evelyn J. Caples

Marla,
It seems like only yesterday that you were our little "Pooh-Pooh." Through the years we have fussed, laughed and cried. But there was one thing that never changed, the fact that you have always been a blessing to us. Today you become a young lady, but you will always be dad and mom's little girl.
The dearest daughter anywhere! With all our love and support!



Forever, Always,
and for Love!

Dad and Mom



And Now A Few Words From My Friends . . .
